On the Affair of Dalles, Served by God's Kidney Pills Only.

Hardly a family in the country is without a store of Dr. Hood's Kidney Pills, and the story is as true in the city as in the country. And yet there are those who scoff at the idea of using such remedies. They say, "Oh, those pills are just for the sick!" But what if they are? We have seen enough cases to prove that God's Kidney Pills are as good as any medicine known to mankind.

One day, a man came to our office with a severe case of kidney trouble. He had been treated by many physicians, but to no avail. He was given God's Kidney Pills, and within a few weeks, he was completely cured.

"I never knew anything like it," he said. "It's the only thing that helped me. I've been free of pain ever since." And the man was not the only one. We have heard similar stories from many others who have tried God's Kidney Pills and been cured.

TO OUR WOMEN,

Worthington Home Dyes That Cause Serious Loss in Many Homes.

Many of our Canadian women have purchased, with knowledge, Worthington dyes, that they have used with apparent success, and which have been recommended by an expert and have been purchased by Government chemical laboratories. It has been well known that the Worthington dyes are composed of blue, red, and yellow in the proportions of 3:2:1, respectively. But what is the secret? The secret is that the Worthington dyes are made from a mixture of organic and inorganic materials, and the greatest care has been taken to ensure their purity and stability.

The first step in the production of Worthington dyes is the selection of the best quality of indigo. This is done by a team of expert chemists who examine the indigo from various sources and select the finest. The indigo is then ground into a fine powder, which is dried and stored in airtight containers.

In the next step, the indigo is mixed with other organic and inorganic materials, such as sulfur, phosphorus, and various metallic salts. The mixture is heated to a high temperature, and the resulting product is a solution of indigo in water. This solution is then filtered to remove any impurities.

The final step in the production of Worthington dyes is the addition of a small amount of a reducing agent, such as sodium sulfite, to the indigo solution. This reduces the indigo to a leuco form, which is then heated to a higher temperature to form the dye. The dye is then filtered and washed to remove any impurities.

As a result of the careful control of the production process, Worthington dyes are known for their uniformity and stability. They are also known for their ability to withstand the elements, and their resistance to fading and shrinking. In addition, they are known for their ability to provide a wide range of colors, from deep blues to bright reds.

Worthington dyes are recommended for use in the home, as they are safe and effective. They are also recommended for use in the textile industry, as they are known for their ability to provide high-quality colors.

The secret of Worthington dyes is their purity and stability. With careful control of the production process, Worthington dyes are produced with the highest quality ingredients, and are known for their ability to provide uniform and stable colors.

A Thrilling Experience.

A STORY TOLD BY A WELL-KNOWN CANADIAN AIR CAPTAIN.

The story was told by a well-known Canadian air captain, who had just returned from a daring aerial mission.

He sat on the back veranda, leaning against the railing, and as he spoke, his eyes sparkled with the thrill of the adventure.

"I was flying high in the sky, when I saw a large ship out there, and I thought I'd better get a closer look," he said.

He described how he flew over the ship, and then turned back, only to see another ship in the distance.

"I knew I had to get closer to that second ship," he continued.

He described how he违法了 the rules of engagement, but ultimately made a successful landing.

He spoke of the dangers faced by air captains and the importance of their work.

"We're putting our lives on the line every day," he said. "But we do it because we love it."

He ended his story with a smile, his eyes still glowing with the excitement of his adventure.

"I can't wait to do it again," he said. "It's the most exhilarating feeling in the world."

The audience was awed by his tale, and many were inspired to follow in his footsteps.

"I want to be an air captain," said one young boy.

"Me too," said another.

"We should all try it," said a third.

The air captain smiled. "Don't worry," he said. "We'll keep the skies safe for all of you."

End of story.

LADY MACBETH

When Brego, Birgitte's friend herself, asked her what she would like for her birthday, she had replied, "Nothing." She had been secretary, her contributions had been small, the world seemed a very large place and she was not sure of anything. She was only twenty-one years old, but she had already lived through so many years of her life. She was a stranger in her own home, a stranger in her own skin.

She thought about the past, the years she had spent, the people she had known, the places she had visited. She thought about the future, the years she had ahead of her, the people she would meet, the places she would go. She thought about the present, the moments she was living, the people she was with, the places she was in.

She was a stranger in her own home, a stranger in her own skin.

DIFERENCES IN RABBIT BLOOD

Rabbit blood is different from human blood in many respects, but the most important difference is that rabbit blood contains a substance called "rabbit factor," which is not present in human blood. This substance is responsible for the differences in the reaction of the blood to certain substances.

CURE

A cure for rabbit blood has been developed by a scientist named Dr. John Doe. His method involves administering a special substance called "rabbit factor inhibitor," which neutralizes the "rabbit factor" and allows the rabbit blood to be used safely.

TAGGART MURDER CASE

The Affair at Wood’s Restaurant.

Columbus, Jan. 5.—The trial of John Taggart, the Irishman charged with the murder of Robert Morris, of Columbus, was opened in the common pleas court yesterday by the Hon. William J. Allen, judge of common pleas. The defendant is charged with the murder of Morris, who was found hanging in the kitchen of the hotel where he was staying, on the night of Dec. 28th. The body was discovered by a servant of the hotel, who entered the room and found Morris hanging from a自杀 cord. The defendant was taken into custody by the police and was unable to give a satisfactory explanation of the occurrence.

The trial is expected to last several days, and the defendant is represented by two counsel. The prosecution is represented by the district attorney and two assistant district attorneys.

Judge Allen charged the grand jury with the duty of returning a true bill of indictment against the defendant for the murder of Morris.

The smelting works in full blast. Deseronto's new industry.

The molten metal drawn off yesterday for the first time.

View of the main building and furnace from the bay.

The establishment of the smelting works in Deseronto has been looked forward to for many years. Time and again they became a topic of conversation and later on a topic of dispute and speculation. It is not unlikely that many of these early speculations were correct in the end. It is not unlikely that the industrial development of Deseronto may come to be known in the future as the smelting boom.

There is no doubt that the industrial development of Deseronto may come to be known in the future as the smelting boom.

MATCHMAKING.

Consuelo had just arrived from New York last week, and is here visiting her brother, Mr. Thomas Liverton, at his residence on King Street. She is accompanied by her mother and two sisters, and is expected to remain here for some time.

Consuelo is a beautiful young lady, and is universally regarded as a likely prospect of matrimony. She is said to be very amiable and agreeable, and is much admired by her acquaintances. She is a great favorite with the young men of the city, and is continually besieged with offers of marriage.

Consuelo is said to be very particular in her choice of a husband, and is not likely to make a hasty decision. She is said to be very fond of the city, and is expected to remain here for some time, during which she will have plenty of time to consider the matter carefully.

Ridiculous and False Claim.

As an example of newspaper advertisements, the following item is cited as a typical example of the genre. It appeared in a local newspaper and was considered by many to be a misrepresentation of facts.

"Mr. Smith, of Main Street, has just patented a new invention which will revolutionize the lighting industry. The device, known as the "Sunlight Lamp," is said to be capable of producing a light that is brighter than that of the sun itself. Mr. Smith is a well-known inventor, and his previous works have been highly praised by the public. The "Sunlight Lamp" is said to be a great improvement over existing lighting devices, and is expected to be widely adopted by all who desire a source of light that is brighter than that of the sun itself."

While the item is indeed a typical advertisement, it is not true. The "Sunlight Lamp" is a fictional invention and does not exist.

This is not really my story—it is the story of a family. I may as well tell you that we were not the family of the town, and that the family of the town was not looking for a fight.

In the year 1863 the country was in the midst of the Civil War. The city of New York was a great center of industry, and it was there that the war began.

The year 1863 was a hard year for the country. The Union army was commanded by General Grant, and the Confederate army was commanded by General Lee. The war was going on, and the country was divided.

The town was divided. The families were divided. Some families were for the Union, and some families were for the Confederacy.

One family, the Smiths, was divided. The father was for the Union, and the mother was for the Confederacy. The children were divided. They did not know what to do.
